

New Orleans Recovery Council

I am honored to have recently been selected as a member of the New Orleans Recovery Council, which met today at the University of New Orleans. The meeting primarily focused on assessing the city's infrastructure needs and rebuilding the many neighborhoods that still show the impact of Hurricanes Katrina and Rita. Here's the link to the related story which appears in today's Times-Picayune:

Last Weekend to view Martin Luther King Exhibit

This weekend marks your final opportunity to see the "Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Commemorative Art Exhibition" at the New Orleans African American Museum, 1418 Governor Nicholls Street. Viewings are available Saturday and Sunday, 11 am to 4 pm. Associate Professor Charlie Johnson serves as curator of the exhibition, which is presented by the Center for African and African American Studies, in collaboration with the New Orleans Chapter of the National Conference of Artists, the New Orleans African American Museum and the Stella Jones Gallery.
